About the Event:

The Department of Commerce (Shift – II) undertook the initiative to sensitise students on the students' preparedness to be a team player while working in an organisation or in a workforce. It is widely observed that the working capacity of people has been drastically affected due to the outbreak of Covid Pandemic, that is people have become more lethargic and the results or their productivity has drastically reduced.

As students are nearing the final moments of their college life, they required proper guidance for approach to work as an employee or to face any entrepreneurial aspects if they are to lead a business firm, as they play a vital role in determining their capability. This session "Industry Readiness" was organised to help the final year students to equip themselves on the skills and experience and the determination they require to work in a workforce or to guide them towards developing the correct approach in achieving the above said.

Our speaker for the session, Mr. Aakash Lalith Kumar, our very own alumni, is a Senior Capabilities Analyst in Mckinsey's Core APAC regional team, uniquely experienced in supporting global north Asian companies to grow their business verticals in other regions and also helping senior client executives on structuring new business development ideas and long-term business strategy through workshops, white paper discussions, etc. He has worked with client service teams in engagements across multiple industries such as retail, automotive, engineering, high tech and functional areas such as strategy, sales & marketing and research & development. He shared his memories on the ever-changing landscape other college ever since completion of his graduation program.

Firstly, Mr. Aakash had started the session with posing questions about the career plans each student has after completing their graduation. He gave an intro about the topic by presenting few images of people from various professions and students showed enthusiasm in answering the questions raised by the speaker. The active participation from the crowd made the session more vibrant and interesting. The speaker ensured that he interacted with everyone and the students also ensured the same.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE (SHIFT-II)
LOYOLA COLLEGE (AUTONOMOUS),
CHENNAI – 600034

He carried on the session with various hard and soft skills required while working in a team and he had emphasised on the soft skills required, that is verbal and non-verbal communications-resilience, collaboration, ability to initiate and thinking out of the box, as these are the vital soft skills required for any individual working in a team which will help in building an efficient workforce and also yield the best results.

He concluded the session with valid points to ready the students for the employment opportunities or any entrepreneurial aspects we would face after graduating. The session was very informative and the key takeaways from the session were the verbal and non-verbal communications required and also the Hard and soft skills required for every student. At the end of the session, students realised the potential and the capability each individual requires to work in an organization or to lead an organization.
