Chennai: A war of wits and entrepreneurial acumen was the highlight at the Lawrence Sundaram Hall, Loyola College, when around 100 teams consisting of Class 9 to 12 school students from all over the city congregated to participate in 'Connaissance' - The Business and Current affairs quiz recently.

The event was organised by the students of BBA France discipline of Loyola College in collaboration with the X Quiz it, a Chennai-based knowledge start-up specialising in providing customised knowledge services and hosts of numerous quizzes around India, a press release said.

A concoction of myriad national and international topics was lined up for the students to keep them energised throughout the day and also keep the audience interested. "The calibre of questions was equivalent to that posed in quizzes in national B Schools and other reputed educational institutions. An ideal example would be a question seeking to identify the first airline to introduce premium economy seats in domestic routes in India and this had the zestful participants buzzing away in no time," said X Quiz It founder Arvind.

There were interactive quiz sessions for audiences which left the whole arena buzzing with avid interest. Of the competitors, six teams proceeded to the final round that was designed in a manner befitting X Quiz It's motto of 'Knowledge is fun'.

To live up to the quizzing legacy of Chennai, the competition was intense and the audience watched with baited breath eager to know who would walk away with the enticing cash prize on offer.

Finally, it was Vidya Mandir who emerged as winners of Connaissance followed by DAV - Gopalapuram.
